THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Upholds the Monroe Doctrine and Suggests a Boundary Commission.

Washington, Dec. 18. - President Cleveland's message, accompanying the correspondence with England on the Venezuelan boundary dispute, says: TO THE CONGRESS:

"In my annual message addressed to the congress on the 3rd instant, I called attention to the pending boundary controversy between Great Britain and the republic of Venezuela and recited the substance of a representation made by this government to her Britannic majesty's government suggesting reasons why such dispute should be submitted to arbitration for settlement and inquiring whether it would be so submitted.

"The answer of the British government, which was then awaited but has since been received with the dispatch to which it is a reply, is hereto apmunications addressed by the British prime minister to Sir Julian Panneeote, the British ambassador at this capital. It will be seen that one of these communications is devoted exclusively to observations upon the Monroe doctrine and claims that in the present instance a new and strange extension and development of this doctrine is insisted on by the United States, that the reasons justifying an appeal to the doctrine enunciated by President Monroe are generally inapplicable to the state of things in which we live at the present day," and especially inapplicable to a controversy involving the boundary line between Great Britain and Venezula.

"Without attempting extended argument in reply to these positions, it may not be amiss to suggest that the doctrine upon which we stand is strong and sound, because its enforcement is important to our peace and safety as a nation and is essential to the integrity of our free institutions and the transmit maintenance of our distinctive form of government. It was intended to apply to every stage of our national life and cannot become obsolete while our republic endures. If the balance of power is justly a cause for healous auxiety among the governments of the old world, and a subject it is our absolute non-interference, none one less is an observance of the Monroe doctrine of vital concern to our people and their gov-ernmient. Monroe Ductrine Applicable.

"Assuming, therefore, that we may properly insist upon this doctrine without regard to the state of thinge in which we live, or any changed condinons here or elsewhere, it is not apparent why its application may not be m. voked in the present controversy. "If a European power, by an exten-

non of its boundaries, takes possession of the territory of one of our neighboring republics against its will and in derogation of its rights, it is difficult to see why, to that extent, such European power does not thereby attempt to extend its system of government to that portion of this continent which is thus taken. This is the precise action which President Monroe declared to be dangerous to our peace and safety, and it can make no difference whether the European system is extended by an advance of frontier or otherwise.

'It is also suggested in the British reply that 'we should not seek to apply the Monroe doctrine to the pending dispute, because it does not embody any principle of international law which is founded on the general consent of nations,' and that 'no statesman, however eminent, and no nation. however powerful, are competent to insert into the code of international law a novel principle which was never recognized before, and which has not been accepted by the government of any other country.'

"Practically, the principle for which we contend has peculiar, if not exclusive, relation to the United States. It may not have been admitted in so many words to the code of interna tional law, but since in international councils every nation is entitled to the rights belonging to it, if the enforce ment of the Monroe doctrine is some thing we may justly claim, it has its place in the code of international law as certainly and as securely as if it were specifically mentioned, and when the United States is a suitor before the high tribunal that administers international law, the question to be determined is whether of mot the present claims which the justice of that code of law can find to be right and valid.

"The Monroe doctrine finds its recognition in those principles of international law which are based upon the theory that every nation shall have its rights protected and its just claims en-

We Know We Are Right.

"Of course this government is entire y confident that under the sanction of this doctrine we have clear rights and undoubted claims. Nor is this ignored in the British reply. he prime minister, while not admitting that the Monroe doctrine is appareable to present conditions, states: 'In declaring that the United States would resist any such enterprise if it was contemplated. President Monroe adopted a policy which received the entire sympathy of the English government of that date. He further declares: Though the lan-guage of President Monroe is directed to the attainment of objects which most Englishmen would agree to be salutary, it is impossible to admit that they have been inscribed by any adequate authority in the code of international law.' Again he says: They (her majesty's government) fully concur with the view which President Monroe apparently entertained, that any disturbance of the existing territorial distribution in that hemisphere by any fresh acquisitions on the part of any European state would be a highly inexpedient change.'

"In the belief that the doctrine for which we contend was clear and definite, that it was founded upon substantial considerations and involved our safety and welfare, that it was fully applicable to our present conditions! and to the state of the world's progress and that it was directly related to the pending controversy and without any conviction as to the final merits of the dispute, but auxious to learn in a satisfactory and conclusive manner whether Great Britain sought, under a claim of boundary, to extend her possessions on this continent without right, or whether she merely sought possession of territory fairly included within her line of ownership, this government proposed to the government of Great Britain a resort to arbitration as the proper means of settling the question, to the end that a vexatious boundary dispute between the two contestants might be determined and our exact standing and relation in respect to the controversy might be made clear.

England Reluses to Arbitrate. "It will be seen from the correspondence herewith submitted that this prop osition has been declined by the British government, upon grounds which, in the circumstances, seem to me to be far from satisfactory. It is deeply disappointing that such an appeal, actuated by the most friendly feelings toward bot's nations directly concerned, addressed to the sense of justice and to the magnanimity of one of the great powers of the world and touching its relations to one comparatively weak and small, should have produced no better results.

"The course to be pursued by this" government, in view of the present condition, does not appear to admit of ! serious doubt. Having labored faithfully for many years to induce Great Britain to submit this dispute to unparts I arbitration, and having been now finally apprised of her refusal to do so, nothing remains but to accept the situation, to recognize its plain re quirements and deal with it accordingly Great Britain's present proposition has never thus far been regarded as admis sible by Venezuela, though any adjust ment of the countary which that coun try may deem for her advantage and may enter into of her own free will cannot of course be objected to by the United States.

"Assuming, how-ver, that the attitude of Venezuela will remain un changed, the dispute has reached such a stage as to make it now incumber upon the United States to take measure nres to determine with sufficient certainty for its justification what is the true divisional line between the repubhe of Venezuela and British Guana. The inquiry to that end should, of course, he conducted carefully and judically, and due weight should be given to all available evidence, records and facts in support of the claims of both parties.

suggests a Commission, . In order that such an examination should be prosecuted in a thorough and satisfactory manner. I suggested that the congress make an adequate appropriation for the expenses of a commis sion. to be appointed by the executive, who shall make the necessary investigation and report upon the matter with the least possible delay.

"When such report is made and ac cepted it will, in my opinion, be the duty of the United States to resist by every means in its power as a willful aggression upon its rights and interests the appropriation by Great Britain of anylands or the exercise of governmental jurisdiction over any territory which after investigation, we have determined of right belongs to Venezuela. quences that may follow.
"I am nevertheless firm in my conviction, that while it is a grevious thing to contemplate, the two great English speaking peoples of the world as being otherwise than friendly competitors in the onward march of civilization and strenuous and worthy rivals in all the arts of peace: there is no calamity which a great nation can invice which equals that which follows a supine submission to wrong and injustice and the consequent loss of national self-respect and honor beneath which is shielded and defended a people's safeey and greatness. "GROVER CLEVEAND."

OLNEY'S VIGOROUS NOTE. His Demand on England to Arbitrate Written In Strong Terms.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Secretary Olney's letter addressed to Ambassador Bayard is dated July 20.

The secretary begins by stating that the president has given much anxious thought to the subject and has not reached a conclusion without a lively sense of its great importance as well as | Said he: 'Our just apprehensions of the serious possibility involved in are not to be allayed by suggestions of any action now to be taken. He then the good will of European powers tocomments on the long duration of the boundary dispute, the "indefinite" claims of both parties, "the continuous growth of the undefined British claims." the fate of the various attempts at arbitration of the controversy and the part in the matter heretofore taken by the United States. He shows that the British claims since the Schomburg line was run have moved the troutier of British Guiana farther and farther to the westward of the line proposed by Lord Aberdeen in 1841.

The above he reiterates in a sum mary comprising the whole situation, in which he calls attention to Venezuela's attempt for years to arbitrate and Great Britain's continued refusal, me less Venezuela should first renounce in England's favor a large part of Venezuela's claims. He also says that the disparity in strength of the parties is such that Venezuela can hope to establish her claim only through peaceful methods. He then says that the interference of the United States is either meddling or it is action based on a right and duty which, if this country has the power sufficient, shall be up

The secretary lays it down as a canon of international law that a na tion may justly interpose in a controversy between other nations whenever "what is done or proposed by any other | Venezuela you are not strong enough parties primarily concerned is a seri- to get anything by force and we won't ous and direct menace to its own integrity, tranquility or welfare." The propriety of the rule when applied in to invasion and conquest, and our duty good faith will not be questioned in any quarters, though he says it habeen given a wide scope and too often made a cloak for schemes of wanton leads him up to an elaborate review of the Monroe doctrine, and Secretary Olney, stating that the proposition that America is in no part open to colonization having long been conceded, says that our present concern is with the other practical application of the Mon-roe doctrine, viz.: That American nonintervention in Europe necessarily implied European non-intervention in American affairs, the disregard of which by any European power is to be deemed an act of unfriendliness toward the United States. On this point the secretary says

"The precise scope and limitations of this rule cannot bee too clearly apprehended. It does not establish any gen. unnecessary. eral protectorate by the United States over other American states. It does not relieve any American state from its obligations as fixed by international law, nor prevent any European nower directly interested from enforcing such obligations or from inflicting merited punishment for the breach of them. It does not contemplate any interference in the internal affairs of any American state or in the relations between it and other American states. does not justify any attempt on our part to change the established form of government of any American state or to prevent the people of such state from altering that form according to their own will and pleasure. The rule in question has but a single purpose and object. It is that no European power-or combination of European powershall forcibly deprive an American state of the rights and power of selfgovernment and of shaping for itself its own political fortunes and destinies. Congress Must Have Sanctioned It The secretary says it is man fest that a rule which has been openly and uniformly acted upon by the executive branch of the government for 70 years must have had the sanction of congress. Nor, headds, if the practical results of the rule be sought for, is the record either meager or obscure. Its first eifect was indeed momentous and farreaching. It was the component factor in the emancipation of South America. and to it the independent states of that region are largely indebted for their very existence. Since then the most striking single achievement to be credited to the rule is the evacuation of Mexico by the French. But we are also indebted to it for the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, neutralizing any interoceanic canal across Central America and excluding Great Britain from any dominion there. It has been used in the case of Cuba, as if justifying the position that, while the sovereignty of Spain will be respected, the island will not be permitted to become the possession of any other European power. It has been influential in bringing about the definite relinquishment of any supposed protectorate by Great Britain Polk relied upon it, though, perhaps. erroneously, to prevent the transfer of Yucatan: General Grant, in the same spirit, declared that existing dependencies were no longer a subject of transother; and another development is found in the objection to arbitration of South American controversies by a Enropean power; and Secretary Bayard resisted the enforcement of the Pelietier claim against Hasti, declaring that "Serious indeed would be the conse-

the new world which have emancipated themselves from European control.'

Interest Secured by Blood. The secretary then says that the peo ple of the United States have a vital interest in the cause of popular selfgovernment, which they have secured it the cost of infinite blood and treas. ure. It is in that view, more than any other, that they will not tolerate the political control of the American states by the forcible assumption of a European power. The United States is today practically sovereign on this continent, and its fiat is law. All the advantages of this superiority are at once imperiled if the principle be admitted that European powers may convert American states into colonies of their own. The principle could be easily availed of and any power doing so would immediately secure a base of military operations against us, and it is not inconceivable that the struggle now going on for the acquisition of Africa might be transferred to South America. The consequence to the United States would be disastrous. Loss of prestige would be the least of them. We would be compelled to maintain a large army and navy.

wards us, for the people of the United States have learned in the school of experience to what extent the relations of states depend, not upon sentiment or principle, but upon schish ant r. s -They will not soon forger that in the hour of distress all the range of his burdens were aggravated to the pasbility of demonstrations a partiet trail national life on the part of practice pecially France and Great Brown, as whom they had long maintained ... most harmonious rentions. How France seized Mexico, and if that comtry and England could have got a foot hold they would likely have disnern bered the nation. From that grave peril we were saved in the past, and may be saved again in the future, through the operation of the sure and silent voice of the doctrine proclaimed by President Monroe."

His clear and unmistakable position on the Monroe doctrine laid down, Secretary Olney goes at some length into the Venezuelan dispute, affirming that the British claim in two years apparently was extended some 33,000 square miles so as to command the mouth of the Orinoco and dismissing as value less the contention that Great Britain's possession of Venzuela gives it any right to be treated as an American state. He shows where Great Britain has arbitrated other boundary disputes, and declares that it, in effect, says to arbitrate unless you first give up part of the territory. This, he says, amounts is summed up as follows:

"In these circumstances the duty of the president appears to him unmistakable and imperative. Great Britain's spolution and aggrandizement. This assertion of title to the disputed territory, combined with her refusal to have that title investigated, being a substantial appropriation of the territory to her own use, not to protest and give warning that the transaction will be regarded as injurious to the inter ests of the people of the United States as well as oppressive, in itself would be to ignore an established policy with which the honor and welfare of this government it is clearly for the executive to leave nothing undone which may tend to render such determination

LORD SALISBURY'S NOTES.

Denies Our Right to Apply the Monro Doctrine In the Present Dispute.

Washington, Dec. 18.-Lord Salisbury answers Secretary Olney in two notes, both of date July 26. The first is devoted entirely to a reply to that portion of the note relating to the Monroe doctrine, which he says the United Stalee has never written about to any government before.

Lord Salisbury says that this doctrine has undergone a "notable development" since its enunciation by Pressdent Monroe, which had originally received the entire sympathy of the Engish government. But the dangers apprehended by President Monroe, Lord Sah-bury says, have no relation to the conditions of the present day, when there is no danger of analliance or of attempts at European colonization of no "system" upon Venezuela, nor conconcerning herself with Venezuelan political institutions. The dispute over a boundary has nothing to do with any of the questions dealt with by Monroe. The latter did not claim for the United States the "novel prerogative" of sertling a frontier difference of this kind. nor did he seek to establish a protectorate over Mexico or the Central American states So, if the United States will not control the conduct of these communities it cannot undertake to protect them from the consequences attaching to their misconduct. Arbitration is not tree from defects, and the claim of a third nation to impose it on two interested nations cannot be reasonably justified and has no foundation in the law of nations. Lord Salisbury expressly declines to be understood as accepting the Monroe doctrine. International law being founded on the general law of nations, no statesman and no nation, however powerful, can inject a novel principle not acceptable to any other government, and Secretary Olney's principle that American questions are for American decision" unsustained by Monroe) cannot be sustained by international law. The United States cannot over the Mosquito coast. President in American states because they are American, no more than if they were Japan or China. Monroe's language was never admitted to be international law, and the danger of such admission fer from one European power to an iments' which the doctrine has received at Secretary Olney's bands. A fair inference from Mr Olney's arguments, Lord Salisbury says, is that the Monroe doctrine means that the union between Great Britain and her colonies in America is "inexpedient and unnatural," something disclaimed by Monquences if Enropean hostile foot should. roe and emphatically denied by her without just cause, trod those states in majesty's government and the American people subject to the crown. Concurring in Monroe's view that a disturbance of territorial distribution in the western hemisphere would be inexpedient it does not admit this to be international law and cannot accept the doctrine that the United States is entitled to demand arbitration of territoral disputes between states.

also July 26, deals entirely with the boundary dispate on its merits, beginning with a statement that Great Britain does not recognize that any other country has material interest in the controversy, yet makes the statement in this fashion because, owing to the rupture of diplomatic relations, it is not otherwise possible to communi-cate it to the Venezuelan government. Lord Salisbury asserts that Secretary Olney, acting on an ex-parto presentation of the case by Venezuela, has fallen into much misapprehension. He euters into an elaborate history of the British claim, founded on the Dutch cession, tells how the celebrated Schomburg line was run, of many concessions offered by Great Britain to venezuela to reach an arrangement, and suggests that the Venezuelan insistence upon the arbitration of the whole territory would be paralleled by a refusal of Great Britain to arbitrate the Alaskan boundary line unless half of Alaska was thrown into arbitration.

The Street Car Lines Effectually Tied Up.

RIOTERS, NOT STRIKERS, CONTROL

Much Property Destroyed The Police Force Increased ... Militia Ready to Move at the Call -The Situation Serious.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18.—Philadel phia is all but at the mercy of a gang of hoodlums, and the traction strike is not yet 36 hours old. Not a street car of the Union Traction company is running, and that company Montrols every line in the city, with the exception of two comparatively short cross town lines. The police are absolutely unable to control the mob. Howling mobs have surrounded each car, stoned and hooted the motorman and conductor, smashed the windows. cut the trolley ropes and wreaked all possible destruction. The strikers have taken little if any part in the work of destruction. This was in the hands of the rowdy element. Many persons were injured by flying missiles, and there is fear that when complete reports have been received they will include fatalities, and thousands of dollars' worth of valuable property was destroyed. Five hundred extra policemen have been sworn in by Mayor Warwick, and these, with the regular force of 2,100 are making an attempt to quell the rioters today. They have orders from Mayor Warwick to carry their batous unsheathed. Should this fail the govcountry are closely identified. While the measures necessary or proper for the windication of that policy are to be declared in unmistakable terms that the strike is no longer a contest between a railway company and its employes, but a battle between the city and violence, and the city will win if it takes the United States army. The staff officers of the national guard of Pennsylvaura are in their armories, uniformed and armed in case of need. The mayor has closed the saloons.

The war itself remains unchanged. The traction leaders refuse to listen to any suggestion from the other side, and indeed no effort is being made in that direction. The strikers remain firm and have the sympathy of the

WHAT PEOPLE SAY OF IT

Evidently President Cleveland Has Sent

For hithe Most Popular Official Document of His Two Administrations-Covernor McKinley Endorses It. The publication of the President's message in Tuesday's INDEPENDENT caused a lively demand for that issue. There has been no American war scare since ex-President Harrison issued his message concerning the Chilian incident, and the published report was eagerly read, and commented fapon. With almost no dissent, it was heartily approved. The first man to hear the news was Mr. Justice R. H. Folger, who was present when the telegraphic sheets be gan to arrive.

"I like it." said he, "I like it. and it is true, every word of it. Mr. Cleveland has said the right thing at the right time. England has blustered and buliled long enough. The time has come to stop it.'

Charles Steese liked the sound of the document but feared that we lacked ships enough to make a successful fight or defense, if the worst came. Robert H. Day believed that whatever motive actuated the President, for once he had hit the nail on the head, and said that in any foreign complication, this country held neither Republicans nor Democrats Under such conditions we were all Americans. Jacob Hering, janitor of the East street school, said: "Cleveland gave it to them about right this time.' E. L. Royer said that he was interested in but one message and that was now being awaited with feverish expectancy, He hopes, however, that Mr. Cleveland did what was right for Mr. Royer knows him to be a deserving and a good man at heart. Dr. T. C. Miller—So far as I under-stand Mr. Cleveland's position, I think, that he did exactly right. 'Squire B. B. Sibila rejoiced that he

William Johnson-It's the best mes sage Mr. Cleveland ever issued. It is full of meat and has the right ring. David Atwater remarked that he was pleased to see that President Cleveland had changed his views in many respects. As to the controversy between America and England over the Venezuela matter he was of the opinion it would end in smoke. I. M. Taggart—It is the wisest meas ure that the Presiendt has suggested since he has been in office. The United States should not stand by and allow

Great Britain to swoop down upon the defenseless Venezuelan republic. "The President's message is an able document," said Paul Kirchlofer, "and congress considers it such. War may not result between America and Eng land, but the stand taken by Cleveland will serve to increase patriotism through out our country," "I guess you could not find one more enthusiastic over the message than I, said C O Heggem. "I have long been waiting for just such action. The terms of the message are such as should fill the ideal of all Americans. It shows true spirit and that Britain is not to dictate on this side of the water Cleveland could not have struck a cord that would meet with a heartier response from American people. The end was peaceful in the extreme and the soul of the great man left the earthly habitation without a sign of physical distress. scenes where he has spent so many pleasant hours of his happy old age. the vital spark took wings from the image of clay. Judge Thurman died in the setting sun. Shortly after his fall several weeks ago. Judge Thurman's bed was moved from the adjoining bedroom to his library, and he remained there. Judge Thurman has lived with his son, Allen W. Thurman, since the death of his wife several years ago, and being unable to leave the house, he oconpied apartments in the second story of the residence where he spent the last days of his life in a remarkably pleasant and agreeable manner.

fatal illness dates from Nov. 7 last. when he fell while walking across the library floor. A few days after the fall Judge Thurman's life was despaired of, but he railed from the shock and at times apparently seemed to have regained his oldtime vigor. Nov. 13 sons were from the living Jefferson and on that date several of his old friends growth of Jackson; outlived the 11 called on him and had a pleasant char. On that occasion he smoked a cigar with his friends and seemed unusually cheerful and bright.

Since the accident he has had his good days and his bad ones. He had been confined to his bed nearly and the time, and his physician, Dr. W. H. Whitaker, called on him daily. That he was steadily growing weaker was apparent to all, and it had been known for some time that his lease on life could not be protracted much longer. On account of his confinement to bed, Judge Thurman began to be afflicted with bed sores, and in order to relieve this unpleasantness he at times sat up and stood up, but he had not attempted to walk since his fall. Last Tuesday when Dr. Whitaker called he found his patient sitting up in a chair, smoking a cigar and apparently enjoying He shook hands with the doctor and said: "My dear doctor, sit down and talk to me."

He seemed very buoyant and cracked a joke and, as was his habit, talked to the doctor in Freuch. It should be remarked that recently it seemed to be one of Judge Thurman's delights to talk French, showing the remarkable day Dr. Whitaker noticed that he did not continue his French conversation se long as usual and soon tired of his eigar, and when he got back into bed his pulse was rather feeble.

When Dr. Whitaker saw Judge Thurman Wednesday about 4 p. m. he seemed listless and rather heavy about his eyes and in his mental operations. However, he recognized the physician and members of the family. The change for the worse became quite marked shortly after midnight Wednesday night, and at 2 a.m. the family became alarmed and sent for Dr. Whitaker. At that time Dr. Whitaker found his venerable patient almost unconscious. Mucous had filled the bronchial tubes and his breathing was labored. Dr. Whitaker aroused him sufficiently to ask him if he was thirsty, and Judge Thurman nodded his head in assent. Dr. Whitaker gave him a little water and whisky, which he swallowed with difficulty. He seemed. however, to be partially conscious of what he was doing. He then sank into a heavy stuper, from which he was never aroused. It was known at 2 o'clock yesterday morning that the beginning of the end had set in, and the family were so notified.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Many of the old senators remember Judge Thurman very well, as he served with them, but he belonged more particularly to the era of Conkling, Edmunds, Logan and thers who became famous at a period when many of the now older members of the senate were just entering upon their careers. Those who served with Mr. Thurman expressed the highest regard for him, and declared that he was one of the great men of the country He was regarded as one of the best lawyers that ever served in the senate, and several Democratic senators said of him that he more truly represented their ideas of sterling Democracy than any of the men of his time. Ex-Attorney General Garland of Arkansas, who has practiced law here since he left President Cleveland's former cabinet, was a senatorial colleague and one of the warmest friends of Judge Thurman. He said he regarded Thurman almost as a near kinsman and paid high tribute to his personal character and ability.

Secretary Carlisie said: My personal acquaintance with Judge Therman began many years ago, and as long as he continued to take an active part in public affairs, our relations were quite close and intimate. He was a great lawyer, a just judge, and one the most able and patriotic legislaters I have ever known in congress. He was a party man, and his name already constitutes a part of the traditions of the political party to which he belonged, but he always enjoys the respect and confidence of all classes of Attorney General Harmon said: "A! len G. Thurman was one of the purest and ablest men that Ohio has ever produced. such high rank in his party that the nomination for president was practi-cally offered to him, he suddenly retired, remained in private life 25 years, then emerged to be elected governor of Ohio in 1873, in such a phenomenal campaign as to give him the political sobriquet of "Rise-up William" Allen.

His Family Was Poor. The nephew went to Chillicothe with his parents in 1819 and that place was his home till 1853, when he moved to Columbus. The battle of life had been rather hard for the Thurmans in Virginia and it was some years before it was easier in Ohio. There were strange social complications in those days and strange political results from them. Many had sought the west to "get away from slavery," as they phrased it, and Judge Thurman's paternal grandfather when a Baptist clergyman in North Carolina had freed his slaves from conscientious motives. Many others had gone west because they were cipline. Twelve hours per day was the bankrupted in the older states, and a prescribed time for Secretary Thurman, Gregoire, that the daughter in time went elsewhere, and that the prosaic addition is made that the old Frenchman taught Mr. Thurman to use snuff.

His mother was his best teacher up with him to a very late hour directing and assisting him in his lessons. It is quite a surprise to read also that her reason for this devoted assistance was that "Allen was a frail and very sports. Indeed he became an enthusiastic admirer of athletic games and score as well as most college boys, and when nicknames in politics were estab-

An Athletic Young Mau.

It is certain that from good training or other cause he became a very stalwart man. Leaving the academy at 18, he served for a short time as an assistant in land surveying, then studied law with his uncle, Allen, and at 21 became private secretary to Governor Robert Lucas, who was, according to old Ohioans, "excessively industrious and a tritle severe." He had served as raptain, colonel and general in the war pf 1812-15, and his leading idea about assistants and subordinates was that they were for hard work and strict disbankrupted in the older states, and a few as exiles from Europe. Among the latter was a fine old French gentleman, whose little daughter was about the whose little daughter was about the whose little daughter was about the daughter was about the covernor Lucas was pre-eminently just and businesslike. some terms of the court, it is said. his practice at Columbus was far more erely, and he grew into a rugged, genial, middle aged geutleman of the finest "Old Virginia" type. His do-meetic life was singularly happy. His con, Allen, fulfilled the father's fondet hopes, and in later years his family hved in a residence joining that of his father, so that the two families were as one. Judge Thurman and his wife remained lovers through all their days of wedlock, and in 1860 no man in Ohio seemed to have a fairer prospect of peace and content. The war was a rude awakening and brought to Judge Thurman a great load of grief.

A Strong Union Man.

He was by family tradition opposed to slavery in itself, yet held, in common with Webster, Benton and Clay, that & was a matter for the slaves themselves to deal with. He denied the right of any state to secode, but indulged the hope that some milder method than war might be adopted to restore the 1 mon. His position was thus stated by himself at a later date:

'I did ail i could to help to preserve the Umon without a war, but after it began a mought there was but one thing to do, and that was to fight it out. I therefore sustained all constitational leasures that tended in my judgment to put down the revellion. I never bedeved in the doctrine of secos

While the storm raged such men as Judge Thurman were reserved. When the era of recentding came and judicial minds were needed, they came again to the front. in 1867 Judge Thurman was nominated by the Democrats of Ohio for governor, against the popular general and ex-congressman, Rutherford

B. Hayes. The result was simply astounding. The Republican majority for some years previous had been over 40,000, yet, after a superheated campaign, the vote in an "off year" was much larger than ever before. General Hayes' majority was less than 3,000, and the legislature elected was Democratic on joint ballot.

Even now there is great divergence of opinion among shrewd politicians as to the cause of this remarkable political revolution. Judge Thurman barely missed the governorship, and as soon as the legislature convened he received the far higher honor of the senatorship. His earnest opponent. Hon. James G. Blaiue, has given him this high compliment:

Blaine's Complimentary Opinion.

"His rank in the senate was established from the day he took his seat and was never lowered during the period of his service. He was an admirably disciplined debater, was fair in his method of statement, logical in his argument, honest in his conclusions. He had no tricks in discussion, no catch phrases to secure attention. but was always direct and manly. His mind was not preoccupied and engrossed with political contests or with affairs of state. He had natural and cultivated tasts outside of those fields. He was a discriminating reader, and enjoyed not only serious books, but inclined also to the lighter indulgence of romance and poetry.

"He was especially fond of the best French writers. He loved Moliere and Racine, and could quote with rare enjoyment the humorous scenes depicted by Balzac. He took pleasure in the drama and was devoted to music. In Washington be could usually be found in the best seat of the theater when a good play was to be presented or when an opera was to be given. These tastes illustrate the genial side of his nature. and were a fitting compliment to the stronger and sterner elements of the man. His retirement from the senate indeed, to the body. He left behind him pleasant memories, and carried with him the respect of all with whom years of honorable service."

In this matter his firm friend personally and equally firm antagonist politi-cally. Senator Edmunds, was his constant colaborer. When the decisive day came, the managers of the railroad lobby were rash enough to announce that they had 40 votes secured in the cenate and could defeat the bill to a certainty. Senator Thurman knew that the bill must pass by midnight or Senator Thurman knew not at all. The hours were rapidly passing and the filthustering of the opponents of the bill promised to defeat it, when Thurman arose with a rollcall of the senate in his hand, and

Mr. President, I understand that the opponents of this bill are confident of victory. They claim they have enough votes pledged to defeat the bill. and I have here a rollcall of the senate with the names checked upon it of the senators who we are well advised are relied upon by the agents of this powerful lobby to vote against it. ' He then said in substance that he would watch the voting upon the bill with great interest and he would like to see how well the vote would tally with the list with which he had been turnished. Somehow the "forty votes" were not forthcoming. The bill became a law and furnished the defeated Jay Gould with material for one of his dry jokes about soon." Early in 1876 the name of Thurman became prominent in connection with the presidency, but he was a pronounced "hard money man," and it was not his year in Ohio. The next winter in the senate he took strong ground in favor of the electoral commission, and th issue of that method of settling the dispute as to the presidency caused him an apparent loss of popularity for a time. In the senate, however, he was easily first, and when his party obtained a majority he was chosen to preside in ence of Vice President Wheeler.

Big Cut in Prices! WEFLER'S China Hall

Glassware Queensware

Our stock of Glassware, Queensware, etc. has been accumulating for a number of years, until every available foot of space on our second floor is occupied. As we must make room for an immense new stock of goods for the Holiday trade, we have decided to make such prices on our entire line as will cause the goods to move. No larger stock is shown by any house in the county, and we know that the quality, is unsurpassed and the prices lower.

Our line of China Ware is most complete, especially in the finer grades, and we are prepared to meet the wants of all. The fact is, our stock is too large, and we are obliged to reduce it. A splendid assortment of Vases, Jardinieres, handsomely decorated Chamber Sets, Bric-a-brac-a thousand and one articles of real merit, will be disposed of at sacrifice prices.

THE MINING SITUATION.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 16.—From present indications it looks as if there might be and operators of the state. The miners demand 5 cents more on the ton for mining coal where company stores exist and the operators decline to pay it. This is the question over which the dispute has ar sen and which will cause the trouble. if there should be any. The executive committee of the Ohio mine workers held an executive session in this city Saturday afternoon to consider the situation. Those present were President M. and C. H. Smith. The situation was discussed at length and an informal conmore time in teat way.

The miners will hold another session today and will probably finally dispose of the question. A convention of miners may be called to consider the subject, a suspension may be ordered at all the company store mines in the state, or auother joint conference with the operators may be decided upon.

Objections to the lodge might be put as two fold, including its abuse by some men, and the fact that it frequently boasted itself against the church. Mr Wise then held up by way of contract, the broad work of the Christian church. The lodge, he said, was only for tempo ral and material affairs, while the church looked after spiritual and eternal as well as temporal matters. The lodge was not a reformatory institution, while the church was. The lodge selected its people, while the church threw its doors open to all classes who desired to lead better fives. The lodge was not a charity rganization, while the church was. The loage only helped those who paid for the help they received. The church presents the only Savior for individual and social redemption. The cross of Christ is the great moral educator. If the gospel of Christ, through His church, is not proclaumed and men thereby led to justice, ove and mercy, there is no hope of any redemption. The moral, social, interectual and financial support of all classes should be brought to the aid of the church that the world may be uplifted and saved.

LIME AS A FERTILIZER.

Its Value to the Farmer- How and Wher It May Be Applied.

If we study the composition of plants, we find that lime is the most important part of the nimeral elements of nearly every one. And it is to be remembered that in the growth of plants every element found in them is indispensable. But how much more must it be so-if such a thing were possible, for one element to be more indispensable than another-for lime, which exists in such a large proportion, to be anything but indispensable. And this must be thought so as we consider that in the ash of hay one eighth part is lime; in the ach of clover more than a third of it is lime; in the ash of potato tops nearly one-half is lime. The ashes of wood, which we think so valuable on account of the potash in them, have several times more lime than potash, the lime amounting to from 30 to 70 per cent. And there is not one plant grown that has not lime in its ashes. The same applies to potash and phosphoric acid, and reasonably these are supposed to be food for plants; why, then, is not lime a plant food? Surely it must be so considered. Thus writes that excellent authority, Henry Stewart, in The American Agriculturist. He also is authority for the follow-

The best farmed localities in the world are those where the soil contains a large proportion of lime, being derived from the decomposition of limestone HEALS THE SORES rocks. But it is not so much on account of the line in the soil that the land is so well farmed and so projective, but mostly for the reason that lime being there abundant and cheap, the farmers burn the limestone and make lime, and apply it to the land. Lime only is a plant food, but limestone is not, and the soil may be well filled with lime stone and yet be quite poor. Now lime is a very active chemical substance. This will be seen if some of it is put in some vinegar. This will foam up and boil over the cup, and a large quantity of gas will be evolved. In the end there will be no more acid in the vinegar. And this is one effect of lime on Civil and Mining Engineer & Draughtsman soil that is sour, such as swamp land, in which the excess of acid prevents the growth of any useful plants.

If we put some time on a dead animal or on any other organic matter, it will quickly decompose it and reduce it to its original elements, and this is one effect of lime when used in a compost, the matters thus decomposed then becoming good manure and useful food for plants. And this same effect is produced in the soil when quicklime is applied, as it usually is in the fall when the land is prepared for wheat and grass and clover seeding. But the chemist may take some sand or other mineral matter and mix lime with it, and then add water, and the lime will dissolve unite a considerable quantity of this mineral matter, forming silicate of line, and by taking the silica from the potash, or the phosphate, or magnesia, or the alumina, etc., that the soil is unde un of, the -lime tenders these ele ments of plant food soluble and available for the crops.

Now this is a small part of the natural history of lunc, as it is used in good farming. And with such a history we must realize its value to the farmer. er it is actually a plant food or not. And as the season is approaching when the land is in the best condition for the application of lime, as lime is most soluble in cold water, and the wheat crop is most convenient for it, it is a question for all of us if it is not advisable to so use it, and gather the fruits of its good effects on the soil. The freshly burned lime only is used, and 20 to 40 bushels per acre is the usual quantity. It is left in heaps in the field, preferably of one bushel each, two rods apart, and in a few days it falls to a fine powder by the action of the moisture of the air, or a shower of rain, when it is easily spread quite evenly-so as to just whit en the surface-with a long handled shovel. But when time is thus used for the wheat, it is not advisable to use su perphosphate until the spring. It can then be used to advantage.

Cottonseed Meal to Swine. The results of an investigation made it the lowa station on reeding cotton seed and other meals to swine seem to warrant the following conclusions: I Contousced meal is fatal to logs when fed in sufficient quantity; the total amount required to prove fatal being in this case from 27 to 33 pounds per hog. 2. Hogs in this experiment were fed! without injury for 17 weeks following artle that were fed from four to seven pounds of cuttonseed meal per bead iaily. 3. Cottonseed meal added to a onn and con meal ration for hogs mamitally increased and cheapened the gains over corn and cob meal alone 4 Out clover hay added to a corn and cobmeal ration and soaked 12 hours before teeding gave no ladvantage in gain over rorn and cob meal alone

Fighting Cutworms.

In a bulletin from the New Jersey station it is stated that clover or sod land is most frequently infested by entwerms, which are less frequently found on lare cultivated land. The worms are especially abundant in crumson clover. Among the remedies suggested clean culture is placed first, prominently associated with early fall plowing. Applying a top dressing of kaimt and nitrate of seda in the early spring it corn is to be pranted is advised, the seeding to be delayed until a rain has carried the fertritzers into the soil. Distributing clover or bran that has been moistened with paris green about the fields is also recomprended.

Proceedings of the Perry Townes THE INDEPENDENT and this is the story

it tells: Browne betook himself to Virginia, and, it is said, became the bosom comrade and confident of Capt O. C Cullen. On the mountain farm where Cullen built his hotel are several old abandoned log houses, nearly fallen to the ground. In one of these Browne has made his home and is snugly enseenced there, with very comfortable surroundings, and living in no apparent want of any of the necessities nor some of the luxuries of life. Pursuing his aptitude for carica ture and sensational pamphleteering, Browne has spotted the mountain road sides and woodlands with his peculiar handbills, exhorting the mountaineers so rally around his standard and become soldiers in the army of industral protest and reform.

The simple-minded mountain folk to whom a few words written or printed on white paper are as magic, have reed themselves under his command. For several weeks they have attended regular drills on one of the level mountain benches, where the motley assemblage of lank and swarthy mountaineers, under Browne's pompous leadership, have been perfecting themselves in the mannal of arms and the movements of the company.

A singular thing told in this connection is the statement of the station agent at Riverton that Browne a few days ago received two hundred stand of arms, with quite a large supply of ammuni-Whence these guns came or for what use they are to be placed in the hands of Browne's company of mountaineers is thus far a mystery. Some residents of the community believe that Capt. Cullen has secured these rifles, and it is thought that when the mountain recruits have been sufficiently drilled an effort will be made to tender their services to the commander of the insurgent army in Cuba. Cullen has sent out a large number of nicely engraved invitations to people who might be inclined to sympathize with the Cuban cause, soliciting contributions of money and firearms, and some connection is supposed to exist between this action on his part and Browne's enlistment of men. To the mountaineers, who are at this time of the year idle and ready for any kind of sport, the adventure is doubly inviting, and they seem to be getting a great deal has been given to the mountaineers. These notifications assure the old followers of Coxey that if they will come to the Blue Ridge ther need have no concern about rations and a place to sleep, and that a full supply of arms and accontrements has been provided for as many of them as will return to the old cause. So far, it is said, none of the old followers of Browne and Coxey have made their appearance. The well-to do people of the neighborhood, while they look upon Browne's operations with the mountaineers as a good deal of a joke, and make no special objection to it, do not look with favor upon the assembling of Coxey's old forces in their vicinity. The mountain people have plenty of pork, cornmeal and preserves to run themselves through the winter after their peculiar manner of living, at certain times of the year having plenty to eat, and at certain others going half starved, yet the thrifty and prominent farmers in the vicinity do not relish the prospect of an overflow of tramps upon their corncribs and smokehouses, as they think would be certain to follow the attempts of the mountain folks to subsist any considerate number of Coxey's

Defendants File a Motion Desiring the Petition "Amended.

CANTON, Dec. 14 -In the case of Anthony Howells, J. C. Albright, E. J. Evans and W. K. L. Warwick against held at the same place December 27 and J. F. and H. F. Pocock and William Penman, Lawyers Robert H. Day, J. A. Ambler, Judge Thayer, and Webber & Turner, representing the defense, filed a motion this morning. They desire the court to require the plaintiffs to separately state and number the several causes of action contained in the petition, and to strike from the petition numerous allegations. If the court refuses to strike out the parts referred to, the defendants desire that the plaintiffs be required to make the petition more definite and certain by stating the facts fully which support said allegations, also by stating whether the plaintiffs or any of them, prior to the filing of the petition, exercised their option to declare contracts in dispute forfeited, and if so, setting forth the date thereof and such Fifteen teachers, including two who lively institute at Genoa last Saturday other than national banking association, afternoon and evening. Miss Emma Kratsch read a paper on "The Personal Influence of the Teacher," in which she held the school board, in part, accountable for the teacher's influence over the pupils. Parents look after the child's bodily wants but provide little or nothing for his mental and moral well being. Teachers can best reach the childsponded, and many of them have enroll- ren by being themselves what they would have the children become. A general discussion followed in which a number took part. A discussion on "Infinitives" was led by L. B. Harris.

The address of the evening was made by Principal A. B. Oberlin, of the East Street school, on Mental Discipline. He said that the principles of business arithmetic were easily mastered under the guidance of a proper instructor, but that growth in mathematical arithmetic does not come by aimless repetition, or conert recitation when pupils recite instinctively instead of making statements based upon logical reasoning. Surmounted obstacles not only teach but prepare us for future struggles. He continued by saying that the mind is not developed so much by what is accomplished as how. Some pupils are helped so much that they are not prepared to breast the storms of adversity that arise, people who have always relied upon others, in a crisis are helpless as capsized turtles. He made a strong plea for careful and more thoughtful reading. The speaker further said that the average citizen is called upon to form ten sentences, where he is compelled to analyze one. Is not the expression of thought the end of education? Many of our best educators are among those who were compelled to labor hard to secure an education. These are the persons who uphold the dignity of labor. The knowledge of books can never take the place of thought Read. Browne has kept in correspondence ing is valuable only as it stimulates with many of the army that marched into Washington in May of 1894, and has sent them the same invitation which mighty thinker is the king among men and the teacher who can make thinkers of his pupils is a king among teachers."

Among the concerns interested are Russell & Company, of Akron, and the Wrought Iron Bridge Company, of Canton. Collector Ohliger, of this district, has fourteen firms on his list in this district. The "state bank tax law," under which the department is proceeding, is found in Sections 3,413-4, and reads as follows:

"That every person, firm, association, other than national banking associations, and every corporation, state bank, or state banking association, shall pay a tax of 10 per centum on the amount of their own notes used for circulation, and paid out by them.

> The only actual steps thus far taken have been to require of the various companies the amount of their issues. This information has been furnished by Russell & Co., who decline to state the amount for publication. It is supposed to be not far from $100,000. Presumably the next step will be to demand a sworn statement, upon which to take legal proceedings. It is needless to say that in Russell & Co.'s case, at least, the attempt to enforce payment, will be resisted to the end

In presenting this matter, Collecter Ohliger relied for his authority upon a book of instructions issued by the department in 1895, in which Attorney-General Olney holds certain notes issued by the Philadelphia & Reading railway to be taxable, and refers to them it illustration. Yet it is a remarkable fact, ascertained by Russell & Co.'s le gal advisers, that this same issue held to be taxable by Mr Cleveland's present Secretary of State, in 1895, was distinctly declared untaxable by a United States court several years previous, this decision never having been reversed. This would not indicate any great amount of research on the part of Mr. Olney.

In this particular case of Russell & Co., their notes were not assued for circulation, but in payment of specific abor claims, and were accepted by cour-

The paper had no fixed value, since it constantly drew interest, and had no standing as money in fact or in law. It will be recalled that the note issue was made in 1893, when nearly all the factories in the country had closed down or were about to do so, and that the expedient was welcomed by citizens generally, since it was known that Russell & Co.'s paper was as good as gold and circulated with the same local effect not, of course, because of any inherent qualities as bank notes, but because of public confilence in the names on the paper.

The Chronic Afflicted in order to have the skill of the Noted Specialist, must either go to such specialist, or the Specialist must go tem. Statistics show that among all chronic sufferers, not more than one in five hundred ever go to the larger cities to receive treatment: this fact is owing mainly to: The terrible dread the sick have of leaving home and going into the turnoil, noise and confusion of a great city, and the worry and exhausion medical to travel. Also the great expense of the trip and the unreasonable prices charged for examination and treatment. It is a notorious fact that chronic discusses are so distinct from acute ones that the regular practitioner, as a rule, wants nothing to de with them, and it satisfied with his income, will frankly say so, hence the necessity of the specialist: and that he shall put himself where those patients unrared by their family botter may see h in and receive first-class treatment, although unable to visit the city to secure a like quality of skill.
